Bismarch has been asked by the leading musical instrument makers of Germany to take steps to regulate the musical pitch, which varies in different countries, much to the annoyance of singers especially. They cannot tune up to every change as the violin players can, and the consequence is a great strain upon the vocal organs and their ruin in a few years. Besides, there is a class of wind instruments like the flageolets, flutes, hautboys and clarionets, that are affected by these differences in pitch, and it is this the German musical instrument makers have in mind as seriously affecting their business, But not for their sakes only, but for musical instrument makers and musicians generally, and vocalists especially, it is to be hoped frince Bismarck may see his way to accomplish the results desired. Memphis should be done to foster and encourage railroads, and nothing should be put in their way that can be prevented or avoided. But it must not be forgotten that they are like other great enterprises, and are to be considered from the same and Texas Railroad Company, which is standpoint. The Louisville, New Orleans and Texas Railroad Company, which is practically a continuation of the Chesapeske road, wants to locate its shops at this point, which is the best for that purpose, being nearest the Alabama coal and fron-fields. But it also wants some inducements that will be equal, or nearly equal, to those offered by the city of the institution and bring it into disrepute in the East. ALBLEY, N. Y. Novamber 27, 1884. 5

My Drake Six—Day before yesterday when I arrived here in the evening from the executive chamber I found in the house a fine newfoundland dog, and yesterday I learned through you letter that the dog was intended as a gift from you. I hope you will not deem it affectation on my part when I write you that I am very adverse to the receipt of gifts, especially in the relation of strangers, which you and I sustain to each other. A number of small gifts have been sent to me, some of them doubtless from those who seek in this manner to show their good will, while others have been received from those whom I suspect of attempting purely to procure an acknowledgmont. It is hard to offend the former class by an exhibition of churlishness or lack of appreciation, and my dispection is to humor the desire of others. The acceptance of presents of value which could involve an obligation I should deem in my present condition enterly inadmissible, and I confess I should feel better if all gifts of every description were discontinued. I have determined to assure you mest heartily of my full appreciation of your kindness in sending me the dog, and that I do not at all distrust your motive in doing so, and while thanking you for the friendliness which prompted the gift, I ask you to permit me to return the same. I shall please myself and hope not to offend you by sending the dog to your addraws to-morrow at my expense. Yours very truly.

New York, December 2.—The suit of Davis Stewart at C. P. Huntington was begun to-day in the Supreme Court before Judge Van Vorst and a jury. Joseph H. Choate is one of Stewart's counsel and Roscoe Conkling one of the lawyers for Huntington. Choate, in opening the case, said that in 1854 Huntington sold to Stewart 200 shares of Central Pacific railroad stock. Stewart held this stock until April, 1870, when Huntington told him there was trouble in the company, as there had been an overissue of stock, but that out of friendship he (Huntington) would take Stewart's stock at par and interest. The same offer was made Aspinwall, but the latter was going to California and he and Stewart wanted to have Huntington hold the offer open until Aspinwall should return betiar infermed. But Huntington was in a hurry, and he at length got the stock prior to Aspinwall's departure. The terms were that Huntington should pay the par price and interest, and if he subsequently bought and paid more for any stock, he should then pay to Stewart and Aspinwall the difference between the par value paid them and the advanced price subsequently paid. Then, if upon the return of Aspinwall, Stewart and he should wish to repossess their stock, Huntington was to return it. Aspinwall went West, and learned that the stock was bringing from $400 to $1000 per Pare, and telegraphed back to recover the stock from Huntington, but the latter refused to give up the stock. Choate and Huntington, Mark Hopkins, Charles Crocker and Leland Stanford had arranged a duplicate of the Credit Mobilier, and it was absorbing the milk of the Central Facilic nut, but that the stockholders had, in April, 1870, discovered the big game of the quartet and had begun moving against them, and that was the occasion of the trouble with Huntington, and not any overisue of stock.

The Grand Jury After the Gam

FORT SMITH, December 3.—The Circuit Court is now sitting in regular November session. The grand jury impaneled are investigating all violations of law and giving attention to saloon keepers and gamblers. An unusual number of indictments have already been returned into court. Some witnesses blought before the grand jury proved obdurate and declined to respond to interrogations propounded them by the foreman. Wiley Cox and Pat Keating were subpensed to appear before the grand jury. Each was asked if he knew of certain parties gambling here within twelve months. They declined to answer and were brought before the circuit judge, who explained to them that they were in contempt and, unless they expressed a willingness to go before the grand jury and answer the questions, would be committed to jail and there confined until they did answer. They were still inflexible and asserted they would go to jail first. The Court then ordered the sheriff to take them to jail and there hold them, subject to the order of the Court. The affair created some sensation, and friends of the parties
